REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A convention of the republican party of the state of Wisconsin will be held at Madison on Wednesday, April 30, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of electing four delegates and four alternates from the state at large to the national convention to be held at Chicago, June 3, 1884, to nominate the electoral ticket, to select a republican state central committee, to act upon the proposition of the state central committee as to the change of basis of representation in future conventions, and to transact such other business as may be brought before the convention. Each congressional and assembly district is entitled to two delegates to the convention.

All citizens are invited to co-operate in the election of delegates to the convention, who are in favor of elevating and dignifying American labor protecting and extending home industries without discrimination in favor of any class or interest, giving free popular education to the masses, securing free suffrage and honest counting of ballots and effectually protecting all human rights in every section of our common country, and who are willing to support the nominees of the national republican convention.

The republicans of the various congressional districts shall have the option of electing their delegates at separate popular delegate conventions, held in the congressional districts at any time within the fifteen days next prior to the meeting of the state convention, or by subdivisions of the state convention into district conventions; and such delegates shall be chosen in the latter method if not elected previous to the meeting of the state convention. All district delegates shall be accredited by the officers of such district conventions.

It having been the practice heretofore in this state to select district delegates by subdivisions of the state convention into district conventions, it is advised by the committee that that method of selecting delegates and electors be continued.

Robert Lincoln's boom for the presidency is large enough to command the most respectful attention.

There is a peculiar quality connected with the presidential tickets thus far made up. Each one seems to be the strongest.

The latest contribution to the list of terrible horrors of 1884, is the explosion in a coal mine near Pocahontas, Virginia, by which 150 miners are reported killed.

The effort South Carolina is making to hang Colonel Cash is a laudable one, and law-abiding people hope the state will succeed. It is claimed that he has killed twelve men since the war, and that for a pastime he slew six negroes.

Mr. Tilden declares that he will not allow his name used in connection with the presidency at the Chicago convention. Having been elected once he doesn't want a second term. The old fox is not without shrewdness. He does not want to be buried in defeat next fall.

If it were reasonably certain that northern republican orators could go south this campaign and make a canvass without making it necessary to take their coffins along with them, they should go and preach the gospel of republican politics to those who need repentence in that part of the country.

According to the views of the young republicans of Pennsylvania, who have no second choice, the following ticket should be nominated:

For president—James G. Blaine, of Maine.

For vice president—Robert T. Lincoln, of Illinois.

The most sensible democratic presidential ticket we have seen mentioned is composed of the following illustrious names:

President—B. F. Butler, of Massachusetts.

Vice President—Dennis Kearney, of California.

The party that has so earnestly clasped these distinguished gentlemen in its arms, ought not to wickedly smile at the ticket.

The Fitz John Porter bill passed the senate on Thursday by a vote of 35 to 25. Senator Cameron was paired, but would have voted for the bill. Senator Sawyer was also paired, but would have voted against it. As amended by the senate, the bill authorizes the president by and with the advice and consent of the senate, to appoint General Porter to the position of colonel in the army of the same grade and rank held by him at the time of dismissal, and authorizes also the president, in his discretion, to place General Porter on the retired list as of that grade; General Porter, however, to receive no compensation or allowance prior to his appointment under the act. The report is published that according to a decision of the supreme court of the United States the bill will give Porter back pay to the amount of $75,000, notwithstanding the bill expressly provides that he shall receive no compensation during the time he has suffered the disgrace of dismissal.

TILLER IN IRONS.

Prentiss Tiller, who robbed the Pacific Express company at St. Louis, of nearly $100,000, on the 2d instant, was arrested in Milwaukee on Thursday afternoon. It was the most important arrest that ever occurred in that city, and shows how difficult it is for a prominent thief to escape arrest. Tiller had a good opportunity to escape detection, for the descriptions of him were not accurate, neither was he well known. He succeeded in reaching Milwaukee last Saturday with his precious grip sack, freighted with $50,000 in cash and nearly $50,000 in checks besides some expensive diamonds and jewelry. He took the precaution to dress in workingman's suit so that he would not attract attention, and while at Milwaukee stopped at a third-rate house. Everything seemed to be in his favor. The detectives had made no progress in learning of his whereabouts and so far as they were concerned, he might have carried about him a feeling of serene security.

But the fates seldom leave the track of a criminal. It doesn't take him long to run into a trap he sets himself. Tiller did not act the part of a sharper in Milwaukee. He went into a store with his $100,000 satchel in his hand, and purchased a trunk. He left the satchel with all its contents in the store, with directions that it be placed in the trunk and sent to him by express to Detroit. After he left the store one of the clerks, without any excuse, opened the satchel and found money by the tens of thousands. Of course the discovery was made known to the detectives, and when the young man called at the store in the afternoon to learn whether the trunk had been shipped as desired, he found himself in the clutches of the officers.

He is a young man, not more than 24 years old, tall, thin, and pale, with every indication that he is the victim of disease. The fate of Prentiss Tiller is the fate of a large majority of great thieves. Charley Angell, the Pullman Car company thief, got out of Chicago with the $80,000, but in his wonderings in South America and in Spain, he imagined that every man he met was closely watching him. If the word thief had been in scarlet and on his lapel, he could not, in his imagination, have been more keenly noted by the public. The conscience of a majority of men is continually sitting in judgment on the great crimes they do, and they betray themselves, and almost voluntarily walk into the arms of the law. The fates and conscience make more arrests than detectives.

ABOUT ELECTING DELEGATES TO THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The call for the republican state convention which meets at Madison on the 30th of April to elect delegates to the national convention at Chicago, says:

The republicans of the various congressional districts shall have the option of electing their delegates at separate popular delegate conventions, held in the congressional districts at any time within the fifteen days prior to the meeting of the state convention, or by subdivisions of the state convention into district conventions; and such delegates shall be chosen in the latter method if not elected previous to the meeting of the state convention. All district delegates shall be accredited by the officers of such district conventions.

But the state central committee express an opinion in the call for the state convention that it having been the practice heretofore in this state to select district delegates by subdivisions of the state convention into district convention, it would be best to continue this practice at the coming convention.

The Gazette is of the opinion that under certain circumstances it would be the better plan to hold a congressional district convention at either Janesville, Clinton, or Elkhorn, and let that convention select two delegates to the republican national convention. If a sufficient interest could be aroused to insure a full attendance at the district convention and at the same time not lessen the interest nor the representation at the state convention, it would be wise to call a congressional district convention. This would not only give plenty of time to select their delegates to the national convention, but it would likewise afford the delegates an opportunity to discuss those questions which will be vital in the coming campaign. A political communion at this season of the year, especially in view of the importance of the approaching canvass, cannot fail to be beneficial to the republicans of the congressional district.

The Hon. Pliny Norcross, who is chairman of the congressional committee, will call a meeting of the committee to be held at Clinton on Friday, March 21, at which the question of holding a congressional district convention will be settled.

It will be understood, of course, that should a congressional district convention be held, the senate and assembly districts will have to choose two sets of delegates—one to attend the state convention on the 30th of April, which must elect four delegates at large to the national convention, and another set to attend the congressional district convention.

IOWA LEGISLATURE.

Adoption of the Female Suffrage Amendment.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 14.—The senate continued the discussion of the woman suffrage amendment, and at 3 o'clock a vote was reached resulting in its adoption by the required constitutional majority. Those voting in the affirmative were:

Abraham, Barrett, Brown Caldwell, Chambers, Chubbs, Clark, Cotton, Donnay, Duncan, Eastman, Gillett, Glass, Homeuway, Hutchison, Kamrar, Logan, McCoy, McDonough, Marshall, Miles, Nichols, Robinson, Stephens, Whaley, Wilkin—26.

The nays were: Baker, Bayless, Bills, Bloom, Carr, Carson, Cassatt, Gault, Graves, Hall, Henderson, Hendrie, Hunt, Johnson, Larrabee, Poyner, Rothert, Russell, Ryder, Smith, Sudlow, Sutton, Sweney and Whiting—24.

It may be interesting by way of comparison to note that the vote on this amendment two years ago stood 37 for, 5 against, with 8 absent. In the house the vote was 61 affirmative, 31 negative, and 8 absent. The force behind this proposed measure is found in the prohibition element, which pretends to believe that woman's vote is necessary to keep the prohibition law upon the statute-books.

The house was engaged all day in considering the resolution advising the governor to pardon E. J. Bruce. At a late hour a vote was reached, and resulted in its passage by a vote of 55 to 40. At 5 o'clock almost the entire senate left on a special train for Ames to attend the oratorical contest.

The breath becomes "void of offense," when contaminated with decaying or impure teeth, if SOZODONT, the national beautifier of badly furnished mouths is used systematically. It institutes a speedy reform of those conditions favorable to dental decay, such as the corrosive action of acid impurities fermenting upon the coronal surface, the destruction of the enamel by tartar and the injurious influence of tobacco. Frightful Holocaust in a Virginia Coal Pit.

Ghastly Death Wields the Fierce Fire-Damp,

And Sweeps with Fury Through the Dark Passages.

The Terrible Work Complete and No One Left to Tell the Story.

Frantic Relatives Mourn the Loss of One Hundred and Fifty Loved Ones---A Scene of Woe and Horror Unparalleled.

LYNCHBURG, Va., March 14.—A few minutes past midnight Thursday morning the little village grouped around the mines at Pocahontas, Tazswell county, was aroused by a terrific explosion, which shook every foundation and aroused the sleeping families of the 150 miners constituting the night force working underground. The terrible sound was sufficient to inform every one that had befallen the midnight laborers. Instantly the streets were filled with a crowd of screaming women, children and men, rushing for the mouth of the principal mine on the southern suburbs. Here a dense column of smoke was pouring from the shaft, and scattered around within a radius of a quarter of a mile were broken timbers, shattered cars, pulleys and machinery, on all sides. For more than an hour wild shrieking and the louder manifestations of grief from desperate men filled the air. No one seemed to have any idea of what should be done and all rushed frantically about seeking for some evidence of the fate of their relatives below. At intervals a more than ordinary would tell that some searcher had found a token which realized his or her worst fears. The scene was terrible in the extreme. Nine houses, dwellings, and trees several hundred yards away, were completely torn to pieces, showing that the force of the explosion must have been remarkable. It was not until two hours had passed that any effort was made by

A TERRIBLE CALAMITY

SHRIEK OF ANGUISH

THE PANIC-STRICKEN CROWD

to ascertain the condition of affairs. Then a ghastly-faced man, with a blanket thrown around his shoulders, sprang on a stump and cried out: "We all have friends and relatives down below, and perhaps we can help them." There was then a hurried movement toward the mouth of the mine, and led by the man in the blanket, and amid the shrieking of frantic women, some of whom plead with the men to remain out of danger, the little band disappeared in the gloom and smoke around the mouth of the mine. They soon reappeared, however, and it was announced that all attempts to get inside were fruitless.

A DENSE VOLUME OF FLAME

soon commenced to shoot upwards and illuminated the scene for half a mile, rendering the ghastly spectacle which had heretofore been viewed only by torch-light, ten times more impressive. The crowd had gathered helpless in little groups, either discussing the situation or lamenting the death of some loved one. It was agreed that the explosion had taken place at Flat Top mine, and had been caused by fire-damp. The situation remained unchanged until daybreak, when the horrors became glaringly apparent. The men who still retained their composure commenced to gather the scattered about. These were evidently the limbs of those miners who had been working near the bottom of the shaft at the time of the accident, and were blown upwards. Not one of these unfortunates, numbering about fifty, survived, as their shattered limbs lying around broadcast testified.

When the sun had risen, the inhabitants of the village for the first time commenced to think of appealing to the outside world for aid. Telegrams were sent right and left in every direction, but it was not until noon that aid reached them from Lynchburg, and the small village nearer. All the morning men from the surrounding country came pouring in, having been attracted by the great volume of smoke rising in the air. The hunters in the mountains were numerous among the body, and invaluable in aiding the panic-stricken people. The greater part of the victims are known to be Italians and Germans, and such is the manifested on all sides that the names of the victims could not be ascertained except in a few instances. A party of miners from coal-field mines under Col. George Dodds, arrived during the afternoon and took charge of the camp. The residents were compelled to retire from the vicinity of the mine and the newcomers then gathered all the fragments of humanity and placed them in adjoining houses. The collection was a ghastly one, and the 1,500 people remaining above ground seemed to have lost all reason; not one in the crowd but had lost a relative, and all seemed to have no hope of ever seeing their dear ones alive. Young girls dashed around aimlessly, many of them covered with blood-stains, secured in

CONFUSION AND TERROR

THEIR GHASTLY SEARCH.

Men sat on logs or lay prostrate on the ground staring stolidly around, their pale features testifying to the terrible strain. About every half-hour a body of men would proceed to the mine and make a determined effort to force an entrance. Again and again the great pall of smoke and the bursting flames from below would force them back, and some of them would be borne half-fainting into the fresh air.

At 7 o'clock p. m. it was thought an entrance could be made, as the smoke showed signs of decreasing. A party of men attempted to go down, when a volume of flames shot up and they were hurriedly assisted to the surface. One of their number, an Italian, named Carlo Franchi, was missing, and had evidently dropped from the cage. All of the party were badly burned, and this showed how fruitless were any hopes of rescue. The shaft at 8 p. m. was a

ROARING FUNNEL OF FLAME.

All the outbuildings in the vicinity ignited, and the fan-house, which had been looked to as the salvation of any who might be alive below, caught also. A shriek of despair went up again at this catastrophe, which was regarded fatal to all hopes of rescue. The men fought manfully to save the building, but without avail. It became evident at this hour that the whole mine was ablaze, and it is doubtful whether it can be extinguished for weeks, if at all. This settles the fate of the 150 unfortunates below ground, and they have for life. Not the least distressing phase of the calamity is the fact that all the families of the dead will be left utterly homeless in the wild mountain region.

LATER.—It has been decided to make another attempt to enter the mine in the morning by an unused drift, which connects with a branch shaft filled with rubbish. Men have gone into this branch and sounded the walls with hammers, hoping to hear some signal from below. The tapping was kept up for more than an hour without avail, and then was taken loud.

THE GENERAL OPINION

is that if the men were not killed by the explosion they have been suffocated. Pocahontas is 427 miles from Lynchburg, the mining village being located at the foot of Flat Top mountain. It is the western terminus of the new river branch of the Norfolk & Western railroad. The town is a new one, of frontier characteristics, and has an ordinary population of 2,000.

MAKING COFFINS.

POCAHONTAS, Va., March 14.—A force of thirty carpenters have commenced to make coffins for the dead. They are working in a plateau to the east of the drift, and are surrounded by torches. As the rude coffins are completed they are distributed to the forty or fifty families who have found or think they have found some portion of the corpse of one of their relatives. There have been several disputes about the bodies, as, owing to their mangled condition, identification is difficult. The old miners think the bodies will be consumed by the flames.

TILLER, THE EXPRESS THIEF.

Arrested at Milwaukee---A Chat With Him.

MILWAUKEE, March 14.—Prentiss Tiller, who robbed the Pacific express office at St. Louis of $125,000, is behind bars at Central police station here. His arrest awakens so much public interest that he proposed to police that the crowd should be charged an admission price to see him as a curiosity. His happy disposition does not leave him in his adversity, and he talked quite gaily with a United Press correspondent. He said he was 24 years of age, and was born in Louisville. He had been in Chicago a week, and then came to Milwaukee.

"You intended to go to Detroit, did you not?" "Yes."

"Have you friends or relatives in that city?" "None whatever."

"What would have been the object of your trip?" "Pleasure and business combined."

"How much money did you take?" "I don't say that I took any."

"Well, how much money was in the valise which you left at the trunk store?" "The amount has been greatly exaggerated. I should say about $50,000 in cash and $50,000 in checks."

"What did you intend to do with the checks?" "I intended to return them to the company in order to save them a good deal of trouble. They were worthless to me."

Tiller says he will go to St. Louis without a requisition. The counting of the money found in the valise occupied several hours.

Tiller's arrest was the result of that recklessness which seems sooner or later to mar the plans of most transgressors. He left his valise, crowded full of money and checks, at a trunk store, with instructions to put it in a trunk he had purchased and ship the trunk to Detroit. The valise burst open in the hands of the salesman as he was putting it into the trunk, and disclosed the contents, and led to the arrest.

THE WILLSON MURDER.

Startling Developments---The Murdered Man's Nephew Indicted.

CHICAGO, March 14.—The most startling development that has yet been recorded in the celebrated murder mystery of Winnetka has been made. The community was astounded to learn that it was reported that the grand jury has voted to indict J. Appleton Willson for complicity in the dreadful murder of his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Willson, together with a man named Jeremiah Mahoney and Neil McKeague. J. Appleton Willson's standing in society and among his business assistants has hitherto placed him above suspicion. His actions and manners throughout the whole affair have been closely watched, and even if there was cause to suspect him the public has never been informed of it. All evidence of guilt has thus far been directed against McKeague. The evidence upon which this new move is based is the testimony of the Watkins girl that she saw a tall man wearing a silk hat came out of the Willson gate the morning following the murder, and the fact that J. A. Willson did not show much grief when he heard of the tragedy. When seen by a reporter and told of the rumor Mr. W. was terribly taken aback, but, in the reporter's opinion, more like a man who had received a terrible shock by being informed of a frightful wrong done him, than a guilty man.

Bishop Clarkson's Funeral.

OMAHA, March 14.—The remains of Bishop Clarkson were interred in the burial ground of Trinity cathedral, which was finished under his supervision only a short time before his death. The funeral services were attended by an immense gathering, and many of Chicago's oldest residents arrived by special train to pay the last honors to the dead.

CHICAGO, March 14.—Funeral services were held here at the same hour with the obsequies in Omaha, in St. James' church, at which Bishop Clarkson was rector a quarter of a century ago.

The Case of Pastor Newman.

NEW YORK, March 14.—The substance of the report handed in by the council in the Rooney-Newman contest is to the effect that Dr. Newman is not and never was the pastor of the Madison Avenue Congregational church. He was a mere supply. The trustees are empowered to remove him at pleasure.

Modern Science and Skepticism

What has Skepticism done for the world?

Nothing but to suggest doubts. It has even suggested that Rheumatism cannot be cured. Skepticism is as bad as Rheumatism.

What has Science done for the world?

A good many things; for instance, it has shown that Rheumatism can be cured.

It has shown that Neuralgia can be got rid of.

Modern science has proved that Rheumatism is a blood disease, and has provided ATHLOPHOROS as the remedy which can completely cure it.

It has proved that although the old doctors failed to overcome Neuralgia, ATHLOPHOROS can reach it, and eradicate it from the system.

It has proved that though these tormenting diseases were so slow and obstinate, they can be overcome in a little while by means of Athlophoros!

Don't be skeptical. If you have any doubts as to what ATHLOPHOROS can do, write to some of those whom it has cured. For instance, Rev. S. R. Dennen, D. The Foot and Mouth Disease in Illinois.

CHICAGO, March 14.—The Tribune says editorially: Unfortunately there remains no longer a doubt that the foot-and-mouth disease has broken out in Effingham county, in this state. Investigations made by a Tribune correspondent at Effingham and at Blue Point, in the neighboring county of Cumberland, prove that several herds are infected. The farmers, not knowing the symptoms of the disease, attributed the rotting of the hoof to freezing during the cold weather. But as several animals comfortably housed have been affected this theory has been abandoned. It has been ascertained beyond reasonable doubt that the cattle in the belt of country between Shumway, Effingham county, in the west, to Prairie City, in Cumberland county, in the east, are infected. The farmers are somewhat alarmed, but are ready to submit to such regulations as may be deemed best for checking the disease.

LOGAN ON PORTER.

The Illinois Senator Stands to the Last Against Relief.

But the Senate Follows the Lead of the House and Passes the Bill—Conger's Proposition!!—Scenes.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 14.—The question of consideration of the Porter relief bill in the senate having been settled in the affirmative, Manderson concluded his speech against the bill before a full senate and crowded galleries. The speech is considered one of the most eloquent ever delivered in the chamber.

Logan followed with a long argument against the bill. He said the case ought to be considered fairly and impartially according to the facts and the evidence, without prejudice against those who tried Porter or sympathy in favor of the man himself. "On one side of the chamber," he said, "we find a solid vote in favor of the bill. Without desiring to criticise the vote of any one, I hope I may be pardoned for making this remark: it is perfectly natural that those who engaged in rebellion against the government, when they fail of success and have themselves been pardoned, should, without an examination of the evidence, sympathize with those who were dismissed from the service of the United States during the war. Why? Because they say, 'We have been forgiven, and therefore we will forgive everybody else, no matter whether criminals or not.' That sympathy, let me say, ought not to go to the violation of the great principle that underlies the very structure of armies—their discipline and organization."

The senator then reviewed at length the military aspects of the case, and the gravity of the crime of disobedience of orders by an officer. He contended that Porter never intended to obey the orders sent him by Pope.

"I charge," cried the speaker, "I charge, and defy contradiction, that Fitz John Porter was the cause of the loss of the first battle of Bull Run, and refused to fight in the second." [Applause in the galleries.]

Frye, who was in the chair, rapped sharply with his gavel, and ordered the sergeant-at-arms to arrest any one in the galleries applauding.

Logan, continuing, claimed that it was ridiculous for senators to defend Porter for not marching because it was night. "I moved 10,000 men at night," he claimed; "moved them in a rain where we had to feel our way. I crossed the Mississippi river at daylight, marched twenty-two miles, fought a battle that day, and, I believe, saved it! (There were one or two murmurs of applause at this declaration.) Take the marches at the winding up of the war. Take the marches of Sheridan, of Crook. Take the marches of the Fifth corps, the same corps that Fitz John Porter commanded and did not command to fight at the second battle of of Bull Run. That corps, after Porter was dismissed, marched for five days and nights incessantly, and fought night and day. And yet senators would excuse the man because he did not try to obey an order to march, because it was night. * * * "If the American senate can excuse an American officer from marching nine miles on a hard road, it will do that which will bring a blush to the cheek of every soldier." * * * "I am charged," said Logan, "with following this man. I follow no man. I have had my honest convictions, and by my convictions I will stand. If I was the only man in the country to defend the name of Lincoln, Garfield and Pope, and the officers who condemned this man Porter, solitary and alone would I stand here in defense of right against a man who tried to destroy the reputation of these men in order to build up one he does not deserve for himself. Reference has been made to the letter Gen. Grant wrote on this case. I served with Grant for three years. I went into the army almost at the same time he did. I have known him for a great many years. I would not say one word that would deprive him of the great reputation he has justly won before the American people. But as a lawyer, I do not think Gen. Grant can be styled first-class." [Laughter.] "The point in this letter," continued the senator, "was that Porter was guilty if there was a battle on the 29th of August." He (Logan) contended that there was a battle on that day, and quoted from the reports of Confederate commanders in support of his position. Sewell interrupted with the remark that he did not deny there was fighting that day. One isolated brigade was in action.

"Yes," rejoined Logan, amid a roar of laughter, "and one isolated brigade commanded by Porter did not fight at all. There was nothing in the evidence showing that Porter gave an order to engage in battle or in a skirmish that day. To claim that a man must not fight because he expects to be whipped is something new in military science. I have learned that is the idea of some gentlemen since I came to this senate chamber, but never during my little experience in the army." After going into the details of the engagement on the 29th of August, and pointing to the enormity of Porter's offense in disobeying orders, Logan turned to the Democratic side, and said, "Of course, it will have no effect, but I say to you that your action in this matter will prevent the people having confidence that you would administer the affairs of this government fairly. This does not mean Fitz-John Porter alone. It means breaking down the barrier between the loyal men and those who failed, so far as officers of the army are concerned. It means opening the door of the retired list to men who will follow in Porter's wake. The people do not believe in your coming here to regulate matters arising out of the war. I am talking the truth, as the people will speak it to you hereafter. Let not your feelings go that far. If they do, I tell you more years than you think will pass over your heads before you have the confidence of the American people. My friends on this side of the chamber [turning to the Republicans] who support the bill are entitled to their views. I do not wish you to change unless you so desire. I say you open the doors of danger if you pass this measure. It is not an act of kindness to this man. It is an act of injustice to the loyal people—an act of injustice to the living and the dead—an injustice to the memory of Lincoln and those associated with him at the time. You who were friends in the hour of trial—you who stood by them then, should not falter now."

Conger wanted to amend the bill so as to place Porter on "a" retired list. He was too late in proposing it, but got a chance to say in a way which convulsed the galleries: "My object was not to bring disgrace upon the retired list, and to make a separate list for this class of cases."

The bill then passed by a vote of 38 to 25. Messrs. Hoar, Jones, of Nevada; Pike, Riddleberger, Sabin and Sewell voted with the Democrats. There was hissing and applause when the result was announced. To avert a scene, Hawley moved to go into executive session. The motion was agreed to, and the excited spectators were compelled to give vent to their feelings in the corridors.

When the doors were reopened a few minutes afterward, an interesting episode took place on the floor. The preamble of the bill had not been read and agreed to, and Conger was indignant that the galleries should have been cleared before the bill was entirely disposed of.

Hawley appealed to the majority not to press the preamble, which reflects somewhat on the court-martial which tried Porter.

"That preamble," exclaimed Conger, "was prepared for another bill, and makes representations not applicable to the bill passed as amended. It is disgrace enough to have been a member of the body which passed the bill [Cries of "order" on the Democratic side] and the adoption of a preamble of that kind should not be imposed upon gentlemen who desire to be exempted from all responsibility of passing the bill."

The preamble was agreed to by yeas 33 to nays 22. The bill as passed places Gen. Porter on the retired list with the rank of colonel.

The bill has been amended in the senate and provides for the restoration of Porter to the army, with the rank he held at the time of his dismissal, without compensation or allowances, and authorizes the president to retire him at that grade.

THE UNION PACIFIC.

Attorney General Brewster on Its Indebtedness to the Government

WASHINGTON CITY, March 14.—A communication from the attorney general was received by the senate in response to a resolution inquiring whether any of the railroad companies mentioned in the act of May 7, 1878, have failed to comply with the requirements of the act, and what steps have been taken in regard thereto. The attorney general explains the controversy which exists between the Union Pacific Railroad company and the commissioner of railroads as to whether expenditures for new construction and new equipment should be, inter alia, deducted from the gross earnings to ascertain the net earnings, 25 per cent. of which the act of 1878 required the company to pay, and in doing so states that the company tendered a check for $60,853, the amount admitted to be due the United States, but it was rejected. He cites the request of the commissioner of railroads that proceedings be instituted with a view to obtain judgment for whatever amount may be found due the government, and the demand of the secretary of the interior on the president of the company for a cash payment of $825,905, in addition to previous demands, the total cash demanded being $1,727,742. Reference is then made to the reply of the president of the company, in which he claimed a still larger amount due the company for carrying the mails—namely, $3,570,779. This correspondence the attorney general received on May 11, 1883, with a renewal of the secretary's recommendation that judicial proceedings be instituted. Mr. Brewster says: "The matter was then taken up by me and considered. My conclusion was that a counter-claim in a suit already pending in the court of claims would involve less expense and be productive of better results than an action of debt brought in one of the circuit courts, and gave instructions that at the proper time such counter-claim should be filed. * * * "In my judgment the Union Pacific 'Railroad' company no longer has any existence, but is merged into the Union Pacific 'Railway company' * * * It is certain that under section 16, act of July 1, 1864, * * * whatever rights the Union Pacific 'railroad' had, and whatever liabilities it was subject to on the 25th of January, 1880, passed the day and were transferred to the new corporation—the Union Pacific 'Railway' company. * * * The work of preparing the evidence to support the allegations of the counter claim is now going on, and I mean to push the case to judgment by the end of the present term of the court, if possible. * * * The case has not seemed to me to require in its present stages strict enforcement of section 11 of the act of May 7, 1878, and I have taken no steps to enforce the forfeiture prescribed in that section for failure to comply with the act. If after judicial settlement of the questions in controversy, there should be manifested any reluctance to comply with the decree of the court, it would then be clearly my duty to enforce the decree in accordance with the provisions of the statute."

Reciprocity of Transportation.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 14.—Mr. Nimmo, chief of the bureau of statistics, has submitted to the secretary of the treasury a special report on the United States and Canadian transit trade and the reciprocity of transportation facilities between the United States and Canada, with special reference to the relations which will be sustained by the Canadian Pacific railway to the commercial and transportation interests of the United States. He says it would, perhaps, be difficult to imagine a more nearly perfect reciprocity of transportation facilities between two contiguous countries than exists between the United States and Canada. In regard to the Canadian Pacific railway Mr. Nimmo says it will introduce elements of competition both of transportation and of trade, the effect of which will be to regulate rail rates, and be mutually beneficial to the commercial interests of the two countries.

Congressional Summary.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 14.—In the senate, the bill for the relief of Fitz John Porter was passed by 38 to 25. A joint resolution was submitted appropriating $25,000 for the suppression of the foot-and-mouth disease among cattle in Kansas. A bill was introduced for a public building at Akron, Ohio. A favorable report was made on the bill for the admission of Dakota.

The house of representatives, in committee of the whole on the postoffice appropriation bill, adopted an amendment increasing the amount for the free-delivery service to $4,000,000. The committee on public lands was directed to report whether the grant to the Lake Superior & Portage Lake Canal company is liable to forfeiture.

The Zura Burns Murder Trial.

PETERSBURG, Ills., March 14.—In the trial of O. A. Carpenter for the murder of Zura Burns, the evidence for the prosecution was the same as that produced at the trial in Lincoln and related principally to the alleged criminal intimacy between Carpenter and the girl. The evidence was strongly corroborative of this phase of the case, especially the visit to Peoria, showing that the alleged sowing situation which Carpenter told Mrs. Dukes he had secured for Zura was a myth, and that it fabricated to enable them to make the Peoria trip together. The prosecution has a witness who will swear that she saw Carpenter and the girl out in a buggy the night of the murder, and testimony was introduced to show that such a recognition was possible by moonlight. A trial was also made during the evening to further test the matter and a man and his horse and buggy were identified at the distance of 200 feet.

Barnum's White Elephant.

LONDON, March 13.—Barnum's white elephant has quitted the zoological gardens enroute to America. A large number of people including many scientists witnessed his departure and accompanied him to Millwall docks, where he was safely shipped on board the steamer Lydian Monarch. The journey from the gardens to the docks occupied four hours, and was made without difficulty. An immense crowd was present at the docks to witness the placing of the elephant on board the vessel, and cheered loudly when the animal was safely embarked.

The Game of Hand Ball.

NEW YORK, March 13.—There was a large attendance of the sporting fraternity at Sweeney's racket court to witness the game of hand ball between ex-Alderman Phil Casey, champion of the world, and R. H. Smith, champion of St. Louis, against ex-Alderman James Dunne and William Czarnoy. The games were well contested and much to the surprise of the spectators the latter pair gained the victory.

EYE GLASSES

Are the best that science has been able to produce.

The lenses are perfectly colorless, do not polarize light, have no PRISMATIC COLORS or scattered rays common to glasses in use.

The core or center of the lenses come directly in front of the eye and never tire the eyes, producing a CLEAR and DISTINCT VISION, as in the natural healthy sight their lasting qualities are such that frequent changing is unnecessary. They are mounted in and SHELL frames of the best quality and with the latest improvements.

Gold, Silver, Steel, Nickel, Rubber

We are the sole agents for the above celebrated goods, the best in the world.

SPECTACLES!

"Sister Pepperbot, have you got one of those crucible cooking crocks that Wheelock advertises?"

"Yes, indeed, I have a large size that I paid forty cents for, and I would no take five dollars for it if I could not get another. I would not keep house without one."

"Why do you think so highly of them?"

"I will tell you, sister Gunboat, I filled one with rice, put it on to boil, and took a nap, overslept, and expected all would be spoiled; but not so. It was nicely done."

"I see

is giving them away as premiums. Let's go down after tea, and buy two dollars worth of some useful articles, and get one."

"Yes, and I will buy one of those $3.50 chamber sets, and get a large size crucible. I want all four sizes; they are so handy."

In the Pilot-House.

"Yes, sir; this kind of work obliges a man to keep sober as a judge. Of all men in the world steamboat pilots and railroad engineers should let liquor alone. For on their clearness of sight and coolness depends the safety of life and property."

Keeping his hand on the wheel as he said this Mr. A. Brockman, of No. 29½ Silver street, Chicago, added: "Of course, some of 'em drink; but the sober ones have the best positions and the best pay. Yes, the work and exposure sometimes tells on us; but for my part, I find PARKER'S TONIC to be all the invigorant I need. I've got a bottle aboard here now; never go on a trip without it. When I haven't any appetite or am in any way out of sorts, it sets me up in no time. If drinking men would use the Tonic it would help 'em to break off. (No, that isn't a light-house; it's a star, low down near the water.) As I was saying, the Tonic is new life bottled up. You see that flagstaff? Well, with a bottle of PARKER'S TONIC in the locker I can keep malaria as far from me as that, all the time. My wife has used it for three years for summer complaints and colic, and as an invigorant, when she's tired out from overwork, she says the Tonic is a daisy. Good-bye! Don't break your neck going below."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be sold simply under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. As unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior articles under the name of ginger, and as ginger is really an important ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

THERE IS NO CHANGE, HOWEVER, IN THE PREPARATION ITSELF, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the fac-simile signature of Hiscox & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

THE MODERN RHYMER.

[R. W. Gilder in The Critic.]

I.

Now you who rhyme, and I who rhyme,
Have we not sworn it, many a time—
That we no more our verse would scrawl
For Shakespeare he had said it all!
And yet whatever others see
The world is fresh to you and me—
And birds that sing, and winds that blow,
And flowers that make the country glow,
And lusty swains, and maidens bright,
And clouds by day, and stars by night;
And all the pictures in the skies
That passed before Will Shakespeare's eyes,
Love, hate and scorn—frost, fire and flower—
On us as well as him have power.
Go to—our spirits shall not be laid,
Silenced and smothered by a shade.
Avon is not the only stream
Can make a poet sing and dream;
Nor are those castles, queens and kings
The height of sublunary things.

II.

Beneath the false moon's pallid glare,
By the cool fountain in the square
(This gray-green dusty square that's set
Where two gigantic highways met)
We hear a music strange and new,
Will Shakespeare was not known to you!
You saw the new world's sun arise,
High up it shines in our own skies.
You saw the ocean from the shore,
Through mid-seas now our ship doth roar—
A wild, new, teeming world of men
That wakens in the poet's brain
Thoughts that were never thought before—
Of hope and longing and despair;
Wherein man's never resting race
Westward, still westward, ... doth fare,
Doth still subdue, and still ... re,
Or turning on itself doth fare,
Its own inconstant fire—
O million-centuried thoughts that make
The Past seem but a shallop's wake!

MY NEIGHBOR AND I.

Once We Were Like Brothers, But Now It Is War to the Knife.

[M. Quad in Drake's Traveler's Magazine.]

I am mad at the man on the southwest corner of the block, and he is mad at me, and its all on account of nothing at all. We bought a mantel and grate just alike and costing the same price. We had things just of the same pattern, laid down by the same man. For five years we were like brothers. If I had a sick horse, I consulted him. We went over to his house to play old sledge, and his family came over to my house to play croquet. I'd have turned out of bed at midnight of the darkest night you ever saw and walked twenty miles through mud thirty feet deep to bring a doctor in case of sickness, and I'm certain he'd have done fully as much for me.

In an unfortunate hour my brother-in-law from Chicago paid me a visit. He said the mantel was very handsome and the grate a perfect beauty, and added:

"But you want a brass fender?"

"No!"

"Certainly you do. It will be an immense improvement."

A day or two after he returned home he sent me a brass fender from Chicago. He not only sent it as a present, but paid the express charges. Some one told the man on the southwest corner that I had a brass fender.

"It can't be!"

"But he has."

"I'll never believe it!"

"But I've seen it."

"Then he is a scoundrel of the deepest dye! Some folks would mortgage their souls for the sake of showing off a little!"

When this remark was brought to me I turned red, clear back to the collar-button. I called the southwest corner man a liar and a horse thief. I said that his grandfather was hung for murder, and that his oldest brother was in state prison. I advised him to sell out and go the Cannibal islands, and I offered to buy his house and turn it into a soap factory.

The usual results followed. He killed my cat and I shot his dog. He complained of my alley, and I made him put down a new side walk. He called my horse an old plug, and I lied about his cow and prevented a sale. He got my church pew away by paying a higher price, and I destroyed his credit at the grocery. He is now manoeuvering to have the city council me to move my barn back nine feet, and I have all the arrangements made to buy the house next to him and rent it to an undertaker as a coffin ware-room.

Emperor William's Oil-Lamp.

[Paris American Register.]

The study lamp on Emperor William's work-table is a simple oil-lamp of a pattern such as since the introduction of petroleum lamps can hardly be met with on the table of the humblest citizen of Berlin. The following incident may account for the non-admittance of the improved petroleum lamp into the historical corner room of the imperial palace. The emperor, whose simple and economical habits are well known, has for years been accustomed to screw down the wick whenever he ceases writing, or reading, or leaves the room.

When the petroleum lamps finally came into general use, the emperor's valet, Krause, brought one and put it on the working-table. True to his habit, his imperial master screwed down the wick on leaving off writing and, as a matter of course, the room was soon filled with an almost insupportable smoke, which greatly affected the nose and eyes of the monarch, and necessitated the opening of doors and windows. Krause finally volunteered the remark, "No, your majesty, this sort of lamp will not suit." "But what are we to do, Krause? Had we better get our oil lamp back again? You know my eyes are weaker and require a brighter light." Well, your majesty, we can have a new lamp made with an extra large ..., so as to do away with petroleum al... "Quite right, Krause, let us try it." And Krause got a lamp of the old pattern, had the burner enlarged to an almost colossal size, a green shade added to it, and to this day, defying all innovations, asserts its place of honor at the work-table of the most diligent of all monarchs.

THE CHINESE ARMY.

A Different Account from That Usually Given.

The Army a Motley Aggregation of Thieves and Beggars, Halt and Blind, Ununiformed and Poorly Armed.

[Cor. Allgemeine Zeitung.]

The Chinese army is divided into four categories—the landers or Futsy, the infantry or Yang-tzian-Doj, the cavalry or Mma-Doj, the artillery or San-Doj. The Tsien-tsing is a battalion of 1,000 men—infantry—sub-divided into twenty companies of fifty men each. The smallest fraction is called schanquan, and consists of ten men, under the command of an inferior officer, who receives as pay 6 shillings and 3 pence a month, the commander receiving £22 10s. A brigade consists of from five to ten of such battalions, and the commander is paid £31 7s. 6d. a month. In order to exist with such a nominal salary, both lower and higher class officers are obliged to have recourse to exactions, and frequently to theft and violence. The Chinese soldier is therefore a scourge to his country, and is generally avoided. When the troops march or have to be quartered, the people look upon it as a calamity; towns and fields are indiscriminately plundered, and the approach of the army is sufficient to put the inhabitants of a town to flight, who carry with them all their portable property.

Men who belong to the caste of the Mandshu are regarded as the true soldiers. Their maintenance is provided for by the emperor. Other castes can only enter the army through influential recommendation. The physical condition of the Mandshu soldiers is not much taken into account, so that there is an important average of the crippled and maimed in the army. Great numbers are absent on arbitrary leave, and thereby the effective strength is much reduced. Soldiers completely unfit for service often receive an imperial permission to beg. The Chinese soldier is not bound to his flag nor by any oath of fidelity; in time of peace he is at liberty to return home.

A regulation uniform scarcely exists. The military outfit principally consists of a sky-blue woolen blouse trimmed with fur; on the chest and back of this garment are sewed two white disks, on which are written the words "soldier" or "artillery." The rest of the costume consists of white pantaloons, very wide and tied around the calf of the leg, silk shoes with thick card-board soles, and in summer a broad-brimmed straw hat, in winter a kind of turban. In this dress the Chinese soldier can scarcely be distinguished from a civilian. The arms are in a worse state, China having lately been flooded with guns of all kinds, and there prevails a most comical confusion with regard to caliber and ammunition. Col. Kreitner, an Austrian well known by his travels in China, says that half the Chinese army is armed with the old fire-lock gun, three-fourths of the other half with old percussion guns of German, English, American and French manufacture, and the remaining fourth with modern breech-loaders.

The auxiliary troops are still armed with lances, bows and arrows, and clubs. For a short period the infantry were furnished with bayonets, but as many accidents happened, the awkward soldiers wounding each other in the legs while practicing, the dangerous weapon is now left safely at home. The artillery is no better provided; the old unrifled cannon are in tolerable condition, requiring but little care, but the Armstrong and Krupp guns are in a deplorable state. The commander looks upon them as show pieces, and only on great occasions is a shot fired against a target, the soldiers hissing and hooting whenever a miss occurs. The men who serve the guns are ill-taught and too numerous. Four clean the piece, six carry ammunition, two point the gun according to the directions from an officer, and commands are issued in English, German, or French, according to the nationality of the instructor.

The barracks are shapeless buildings, those in the towns bearing the inscription, "Beware! Keep off! Here live soldiers." There are no proper regulations. A gun is fired in the morning, but the Chinese soldier generally refuses to be disturbed, and only begins drill in the afternoon. Batches of ten or fifteen men mess together at the hours most convenient to them. Officers who do not belong to the Mandshu caste are ranked below the civil servants, having to pass an examination, which is not required of the others.

The superior officers have a bad name. They impose ransom and encourage plunder, often appear at parade in a tipsy state, and, if in want, sometimes sell the arms of a whole company, which has then to go through the exercise using bamboo sticks. The officers go unarmed in time of peace. Discipline and order are almost unknown. While marching the soldiers choose what road suits them best, and it is seldom that fifty men remain together. The arsenal near Shanghai is directed by a German soldier named Brettschneider, and produces about ten Remington rifles a day.

Frankness of Indiscreet Friends.

[Boston Traveler.]

The impersonal element is one that should be cultivated in life, and impersonal subjects are the saving grace of conversation. Especially is this true in conversation in public places. Using names in a street-car is an offense against the unwritten law that regulates good manners, as is any special and particular reference to one's business, place or profession. How often has a woman sat on figurative thorns far worse than literal ones while her well meaning but indiscreet friend rattled on about her studio, or her office, or her shop, indicating her line of life to all people within hearing. The climax is reached when, at frequent intervals, her name is used, or when distinctly audible references are made to some matters heretofore privately discussed, and comments made with a touching confidence in the discretion or the deafness of people around.

Not True Farmers in the Northwest.

[St. Paul Pioneer Press.]

In Mr. Finkle's store to-day a farmer came in to settle for a load of wheat, and made a number of purchases, and among them were several pounds of very ordinary butter and three or four dozen packed eggs. I inquired if this sort of thing was a common practice of the farmers in the vicinity.

"Farmers," replied the merchant contemptuously; "why, we haven't got twenty real farmers in this county. They are all nothing but wheat-raisers, and that is a long way from being a farmer. A large number of farmers in Dakota, who own whole quarter sections of land, seldom have a drop of milk in the house, and the butter they eat is bought at the nearest store. They don't even keep a cow or pig, or try to raise vegetables enough to provide for the winter."

Where the Wire Went.

The Indians of Alaska are said to have used, in making salmon nets, the bulk of 900 miles of telegraph wire, which were laid by the Overland Telegraph company many years ago, at a cost of $3,000,000.

Letter from Assemblyman Hoag.

STATE OF NEW YORK, ASSEMBLY CHAMBER,
ALBANY, April 13, 1883.

During my temporary residence here the past winter I contracted a severe cold, which for a time confined me to my room and rendered me unfit to attend to my duties. I not only suffered all the inconveniencies which usually attend a heavy cold, but was afflicted with a tightness in the chest, accompanied with a severe pain, which made breathing difficult and rest impossible. I tried the usual remedies—cough drops, cough cordials, &c., but received no substantial relief until I applied ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS, on my back and chest.

These I put on when retiring, and was delighted to find myself much better the next morning. In two days I was well. This, and the experience I have had with Allcock's Plasters in my family, has convinced me that for coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism and local pains, Allcock's Porous Plasters are the quickest and most effective remedy extant.

The Echo.

How like the echo is the human system. If we speak kindly the echo answers likewise. If we care for our system we have good health. If we ignore nature's laws we incur ill health. For all troubles of the stomach, liver, blood or kidneys, use Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic. It speedily cures dyspepsia, costiveness, bad breath, piles, pimples, ague and malaria diseases, poor appetite, low spirits, headache, and makes general health excellent. Can be taken by the most delicate. Price 50 cents, of Stearns & Baker.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla will do away with that tired feeling, and give you new life and energy.

"Fer de Animuls Ob de Line."

[Washington Hatchet.]

Deacon Parsnip, who teaches the night school out at Brightwood, came into town yesterday to visit a friend at the arsenal. He boarded an F street car up town and was directed by the driver when the car reached Ninth street to get a transfer for the river front car. The deacon walked up to the transfer agent and remarked:

"Doz dese transoms 'low one fur ter go ter do animus ob de line?"

The agent replied that the transfer would insure a ride to the Arsenal gate.

"Dat's all right," he replied, "but dese hyar evaparations is or down-troddin de po' fokes so dat I frought I mought a-bin repsited barf way 'tween here an' de animus."

Then he got on a Ninth street car going the wrong way and looked solemnly sedate.

A Tete-a-Tete.

Tete-a-tete, designed for the special use of lovers.

Washington Hatchet: Mr. Frederick Douglass is the latest distinguished sufferer from color blindness.

The Doctor's Endorsement.

Dr. W. D. Wright, Cincinnati, Ohio, sends the subjoined professional endorsement: "I have prescribed DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS in a great number of cases and always with success. One case in particular was given up by several physicians who had been called in for consultation with myself. The patient had all the symptoms of confirmed Consumption—cold night sweats, hectic fever, harrassing coughs, etc. He commenced immediately to get better and was soon restored to his usual health. I found DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS the most valuable expectorant for breaking up distressing coughs and colds.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirors much valuable information.

A special treatment for years. He is not a boastful, ignorant pretender, but an educated physician, seeking to do good, by devoting his talent and energies to the treatment of a class of maladies that have been with him a long and patient study. To be able to treat successfully chronic diseases it requires that a physician should be a sound, thorough scholar in the art of science and medicine generally. He should give his entire time to their study, be thorough in his investigations and have a long and varied experience. Dr. Brewer claims to work no wonders or to do any more than any well educated physician can do, who devotes his whole time to the study and treatment of chronic diseases exclusively, and has had his many years' of experience. For years Dr. Brewer has visited the the places he now visits, and has obtained his reputation by being honest in his dealings, candid in opinions and reasonable in his charges. —Rifles' masquerade.

—Grand Army night.

—The Good Templars meet this evening.

—Our municipal court is occupied hearing a civil case.

—Beloit contributed six boarders to the county jail yesterday.

—Ald. Palmer will build a new residence in the fourth ward this season.

—"John and Jonathan,"—lecture by Rev. Nourse at the Congregational church this evening.

—A party of young people from the city indulged in a sleigh ride to Milton last night, and report having had a most delightful time.

—Another social entertainment will be given by the Grand Army veterans in their hall to-morrow evening, for the members and their families.

—Captain S. J. M. Putnam, steward of the Mendota insane hospital, who has been visiting his family for a day or two, returned to Madison to-day.

—The social party given by the ladies society of All Souls church, in Apollo hall last evening, was well attended, and all enjoyed a most pleasant evening.

—The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Tall, residing on Chatam street, first ward, died last evening, aged two weeks. The funeral took place this afternoon.

—Mr. H. S. Woodruff has sold his handsome pair of bay Hambletonian colts to Mr. H. D. McKinney, of this city, for which he received a very good price, but just how much we did not learn.

—People coming into the city from the country report the roads in very bad condition, and in many places almost impassable, owing to the deep ruts and washouts caused by the snow drifts and ice.

—Quite a number of Janesville people started out to take part in the great wolf hunt this morning. We understand that another party will go out to Mount Zion this evening with a dray to bring in the game.

—The lecture this evening at the Congregational church, by the Rev. Robert Nourse, on "John and Jonathan," will be an intellectual treat. The lecture will begin at 8 o'clock. Admission only 25 cents. It is for the benefit of the Baptist church building fund —Yesterday the brick dwelling house on the corner of Jackson and Pleasant streets, fourth ward, owned by Mrs. O. J. Dearborn, was sold through the real estate agency of Mr. C. E. Bowles, to Mrs. Lizzie E. Bintliff, the purchase price being sixteen hundred and fifty dollars.

—The time for town and city treasurers to make their returns to the county treasurer and settlement for state and county taxes expired yesterday, and all complied with the law except the town and city of Beloit. The list of delinquent taxes this year will be very small.

—There is considerable talk about available candidates for the various city and ward officers, but as yet public sentiment has not settled upon but few persons. There are more candidates named than there are offices to be filled. Yet no one has appeared who is over-anxious to serve the public in a non-salaried office.

—Sargent George Scarcliff was the winner of the Doe medal at the prize drill of the Guards last evening, the other close contestant being Corporal Will Wheeler, Sargent Scarcliff has won the medal twice, and it now only remains for him to "stand fire" once more when he will be entitled to keep the beautiful badge.

—Mr. Jerry Leahey, of this city, a brakeman on the Northwestern railroad, while coupling cars at Woodstock, at noon to-day, caught his left hand between the links, and so badly bruised it that the first and second fingers had to be amputated. It is thought the other fingers will be saved, although they are badly jammed.

—Spring, gentle spring, is certainly near at hand. In our tour of the city this afternoon, we came upon a group of urchins on the west side, who had found a small spot of ground, upon which they were having a game of marbles. If this is not an infallible sign of approaching warm weather, then we give it up. You hardly ever fool Young America on marbles.

—Maggie O'Connell, who recently served a short sentence in our county jail, being convicted of drunk and disorderly conduct, is quite a character in crime. Sheriff Cunningham, of Jefferson county, says that during the past six years Maggie has been the inmate of the insane asylum at Mendota, Madison, Oshkosh and Milwaukee, and has spent 135 days in the Jefferson county jail, and terms in the Rock county and other jails.

—If any one thing is needed in our court house more than another, it is a set of bulletin boards, for the use of the county officers in posting up official notices. Last summer, small cards were tacked up in different places in the building, forbiding the use of tobacco, and now we see other notices are being posted on the walls, and if some suitable place is not provided, it will not be lo before the corridor walls will be highly ornamented with circus bills and the like.

—Messrs. Bowles & Hadden have just sold their imported Percheron Norman stallion Brison, No. 2498, to Mr. J. H. Whitlesey, of Pecatonica, Illinois. Brison will be remembered as the first prize stallion at the state fair at Madison, Wis., in 1883, one week after landing in America. He is said, by good judges, to be one of the very best draft horses in this country, and we predict for him a very creditable showing next fall at the Illinois state fair at Chicago. Messrs. Bowles & Hadden are expecting their spring importation of horses to arrive some time in April.

—There was a happy social gathering of friends at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Taylor, on Harmony street, second ward, at eight o'clock last evening, for the purpose of witnessing the marriage ceremony of Mr. James H. Smart, of Topeka, Kansas, and Miss Clara L. Gough, daughter of Mrs. Taylor. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. E. Goldthorpe, pastor of the First M. E. church. Mr. and Mrs. Smart received the warmest congratulations of their many friends, and also numerous useful, rich and ornamental presents. The gathering was a merry one, the evening being spent in the most joyous manner possible.

—A large party of ladies and gentlemen, mostly members of America Lodge No. 26, Daughters of Rebecca, and intimate friends, assembled at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Howland, on Milton avenue, second ward, last evening, for the purpose of taking part in celebrating the sixtieth anniversary of Mr. Howland's birth. The gathering was a jolly one, and they were right royally entertained. Although the marks of three-score years are furroughed upon the brow of the open-hearted host, he is as lively and jolly as in the days when he was trudging along with the guns of the 12th Wisconsin battery over the difficult passes in the southwest during the late war, and can entertain a party of friends with as interesting war stories as the next man. Refreshments were served in abundance, and when the party returned to their respective homes late in the evening, all expressed the ardent wish that Mr. and Mrs. Howland might live to celebrate many more such happy anniversaries.

Indigestion is quickly cured by the use of Baxter's Mandrake Bitters. Price 25 cents. Sold by Stearns & Baker.

A Characteristic Letter.

No matter in which position in society business may place a human being, the real beauties, and nobleness of nature,—if compelled by the principles of commercial transactions to be placed in the background,—will at times come to the surface, and the true man stands before society in his true position. It is generally conceded by all classes of society that the life of a showman is one not to be coveted by people who have any regard for social standing; that they are a sort of cosmopolitan class, having no regular home; strangers to the people with whom they are accustomed to meet and entertain; thinking little and caring less of what the morrow may bring forth; that they are looked upon by the people who are accustomed to the better walks of life, as a class to be shunned. Much might be written for and against the class of people who follow the life of a professional showman. And while much might be said against this class, a good deal can be said in their behalf. There are many connected with the show business, who, when taken as they appear with their traveling armies in different parts of the country, may have a rough and repulsive exterior appearance, yet possess one of the truest and noblest hearts within. As we said before, human nature will come to the surface, and we know of no better illustration of this fact, than the following characteristic letter from the pen of Col. Burr Robbins written to a personal friend in Minnesota, one who wished to give up a lucrative profession for a season that he might gratify an ambition to travel with a show. The letter is but one of the hundreds that Colonel Robbins receives and is compelled to answer; and yet, it gives a true expression of the genuine man coming from his heart, and sent to one of his warm personal friends. The letter reads:

THE BURR ROBBINS'
NEW CONSOLIDATED RAILROAD SHOWS,
JANESVILLE, Wis., March 13th, 1884.

My Dear Sir—

On my return home from New York, I was handed yours of Jan 21st. It was a pleasure to hear from you. I was inexpressibly surprised, however, to hear of your desire to abandon an editor's chair to become a "showman." I am also aware that you would become a bright and useful adjunct to the profession, were you placed in position to utilize your ability. Have you not, after mature thought, concluded you do not wish to commence "circus life"? Can you realize how difficult it is to live down public expression of abhorance for one engaged in our business? Showmen are isolated, as it were, from associating with society outside of their "class." One reason is they are so little known. Migratory in nature, itinerant in business—qualifications and necessities absolutely requisite for a successful and contented showman. I am in a manner different from the generality of our profession—having had an early benefit of some education and social intercourse with society—before drifting into "show life" and becoming ostracized as it were. Unaccountably and unconsciously following the promptings of a hidden passion, I abandoned the comforts of a home and society and became an itinerent showman, since which, I have endeavored to conduct myself and business in a manner, trying to command the respect of the community which surrounded me, at least sufficiently to permit of a commingling with the better class. Have I succeeded? perhaps in a measure, yet it has been a long trial, self sacrificing to a certain extent in order to exert an influence over a wild, impulsive, generous and convivial class of souls employed in our business. Now, my friend, if you think, after weighing this matter over carefully, you find a strongly impressed desire to leave your family and home pleasures for a life of a traveling showman, I will try and find you a chance with our company. My advice will be, however, for you to procure a whip, mount a chair in your sanctum, crack the whip and holler, Whoop la! while the Printer's Devil beats an accompaniment on a tin pan; continue that until you have shaken all circus desires out of you, and the bottom of the tin pan is beaten so full of holes that it will do for an ash sifter; then get down and write an editorial on the immorality of the circus profession; attend the first religious revival meeting held in your city; get up and state your experience in circus life, profess religion and become a pillar in the church. Hoping to hear from you again, and with kind regards and best wishes for yourself and family,

Believe me as ever,
Your friend,
BURR ROBBINS.

The Weather.

THEY FOUGHT NOBLY.

Another Battle Between the British and Osman Digma.

The Children of the Desert Beaten After a Brave Resistance---Account of the Battle---The Tonquin War.

LONDON, March 14.—A dispatch from Gen. Graham, dated Osman Digma's camp, March 13, 11:40 a. m., says: "The camp of the enemy has been taken, after hard fighting since 3 o'clock in the morning. Over seventy British are killed and 100 wounded."

Later dispatches say the bivouac was exceedingly unpleasant. The Arabs kept up a persistent fusilade till just before daybreak. The bright moonlight rendered objects distinctly visible at a long distance, but prevented the enemy from attempting a sudden onset. The rebels directed their fire especially toward the hospital wagons, which were conspicuous in the moonlight. The surgeons and Gen. Graham's staff officers had many narrow escapes. At sunrise a Gardner gun and a nine-pounder were turned against the rebels, who were within 1,300 yards of the British position and afforded a most excellent target. The Arabs were soon compelled to retire to their main position near the Tamai wells.

Col. Stewart's cavalry arrived at 6:30 and took up their position on the British left, so as to turn the enemy's right.

The British forces advanced in two brigades, which were thrown into the form of squares. A series of encounters followed. Soon after leaving Suriba the great body of the rebels charged the leading square, piercing many British. The sailors inside the square immediately closed up, and the rebels were repulsed with great slaughter. The advance was again resumed, when immense hordes rushed upon the British from both sides. A terrible struggle ensued. The Arabs fought with the greatest pluck and bravado, but nearly all were killed. The Second brigade met with obstinate resistance and was at one time repulsed.

The Gatling and Gardiner guns fell in the hands of the rebels, and were only recovered after a severe fight, when the British likewise gained possession of the rebel camp.

The Hussars made a forward movement and cut of the rebels' retreat to Sinkat. They hope to save the families of the massacred garrison.

Gen. Graham has taken up his quarters for the present in the camp from which Osman Digma and the rebel hosts were driven. The enemy fought most stubbornly. The battle was much heavier than the engagement at Teb. The sailors, the Black Watch regiment, and the York and Lancaster regiments suffered the heaviest losses.

LONDON, March 14.—The estimates by correspondents indicate that Osman Digmas' force in the battle numbered 9,000 men.

The Times speaks of the victory as one worthy to be ranked among the honorable achievements of England's army. The Standard, commenting upon the victory, says it is too difficult to predict what its political result will be. The Telegraph remarks upon the bitterness of the reflection that by a firm policy in either stopping Gen. Hicks's advance or strongly supporting him, the subsequent bloodshed would have been averted.

Additional Particulars.

SUAKIM, March 14.—Additional particulars of Gen. Graham's defeat of Osman Digma have been received. The Soudanese, who fought with the utmost recklessness, rushed in hordes upon the Second brigade square, causing the Sixty-fifth foot to waver and fall back upon the marines, throwing them into confusion. The latter abandoned their guns and had retreated several hundred yards before they could be again brought into organization. The First brigade square stood firm and checked the onslaught, while the Second square reformed. Then ensued two hours of the most desperate fighting for the recovery of the lost guns. The rebels charged repeatedly, hoping again to confuse the ranks of the Second square, but were unsuccessful, and slowly lost the temporary advantage they had gained until the lost guns were recovered. Meantime the First brigade advanced inch by inch, the rebels stubbornly contesting their progress. Resistance became more feeble as volley after volley was poured into the rebels, and finally the front was cleared and the First brigade rushed into the camp of Osman Digma. The rebels, however, did not flee, but slowly retired to the mountain fastnesses, firing as they retreated. The British troops are now in possession of Osman's camp. The rebels in the mountains are quiet, but it is expected that they will attack the camp soon.

As soon as the success of the British troops was assured Gen. Graham ordered Col. Burleigh of his command, who is also correspondent of The Central News, to ride back to Suakim with official dispatches, announcing the victory over Osman Digma.

It has transpired that the demoralization of the Sixty-fifth regiment was checked by a few scores of marines and Highlanders, who retired, back to back, firing steadily. The confidence which these men inspired materially assisted in restoring order.

Bismarck on the Lasker Incident.

LONDON, March 14.—A Berlin dispatch says that in the course of his speech concerning the Lasker resolution, Prince Bismarck excitedly asked: "Am I to be the postman of my enemy?" He added that Dr. Hasbel, the Progressive who, during the debate, has defended the action of the house of representatives, might propose that the reichstag thank that body. The prince, says the correspondent, seemed but the shadow of his former self. He was greatly excited, and his varying expression betrayed pain, sorrow and anger. The Times editorially declares that Bismarck's reasoning in respect to the Lasker matter is irrefragible, though his action is ungraceful.

Bac Ninh Taken by the French.

HONG KONG, March 14.—Advices are received here that Gen. Negrier entered Bac Ninh on Wednesday evening. The combined French columns, in moving by an unexpected route, completely surprised the Chinese, who fled along the Tsaiug Huien road after a brief engagement in which seventy of the French troops were wounded and many Chinese were killed.

The Crouch Mystery.

JACKSON, Mich., March 14.—Galen E Brown testified in the Crouch-Holcomb case that in the pocket of a coat in Crouch's house he found a letter from San Antonio instructing the recipient to "secure those papers before the birth of Eunice's child." Alphonso Carrier swore that Foy, who committed suicide, told him three men were engaged in the Crouch murder. The prosecution closed and the defense will present their evidence next Tuesday.

Not a Satisfactory Job.

[San Francisco Examiner.]

A gentleman from the country stopped at a barber shop to ask for directions concerning the locality of a place where he wished to go, when one of the new hands said: "Boss, yer got mighty long hair. Better let me take som ob it offen yer." "I haven't time now," the gentleman replied, with a smile, "but I'll be in again soon." The gentleman went away, met several acquaintances, became somewhat boozy, and in that condition went to the shop, said he wanted to be shaved, laid his head back on the cushion, and was soon asleep. After shaving the gentleman, the ambitious barber, remembering the conversation of a few hours before, determined to cut his hair. Just as he was completing the work the gentleman awakened and springing from the chair exclaimed: "I've a good mind to shoot the top of your head off!" "What's de matter, boss? Job not done satisfactory, sah?" "Satisfactory! you stupid wretch. You shingled my wig!
